THE MAJESTIC SOUNDS OF A ROYAL WEDDING

Imagine... a Royal Wedding at the Palace!

You are the Princess Bride, and your Groom is the handsome Prince. Your families and friends have all gathered in the Chapel, and there is an air of hushed anticipation as the Court Organist plays the concluding strains of his Prelude. A flourish of trumpets signals your Prince's entrance at the altar. Then, a stately march accompanies your Bridesmaids down the aisle. Following them, the flower girl spreads rose petals from her basket to adorn the aisle for your big walk. The Court Trumpeters raise their heralds once more, and the fanfare you chose for yourself rings forth, brilliant and clear! The guests rise, the Bridal Procession begins, and you take your first steps into a fantasy-come-true: Your Royal Wedding!

Soon, you and your Prince are heralded back up the aisle to the triumphant sounds of trumpets and organ, and the big celebration begins. Your Court Trumpeters will provide the proper atmosphere with music of nobility: Handel, Telemann, Mouret, Purcell and a medley from Camelot set the tone for your Royal Reception. Later, each couple in the wedding party is announced with their own Fanfare as they walk to the head table. And the final, most brilliant fanfare is sounded for the Prince and Princess themselves! Let the Wedding Feast begin!
